FutureMe is a website where you write a letter to yourself and choose a date, from six months to ten years out, for it to be delivered. Letters can be kept private or shared publicly. A separate FutureMe Pro product lets schools and organizations embed letter writing on their own sites.

To get you started, here are 8 things to know about FutureMe, taken from its own pages and our grades.

PART 04 · STANDING

Where it stands

Its grades against its category, and whether to keep it or make your own

4/40

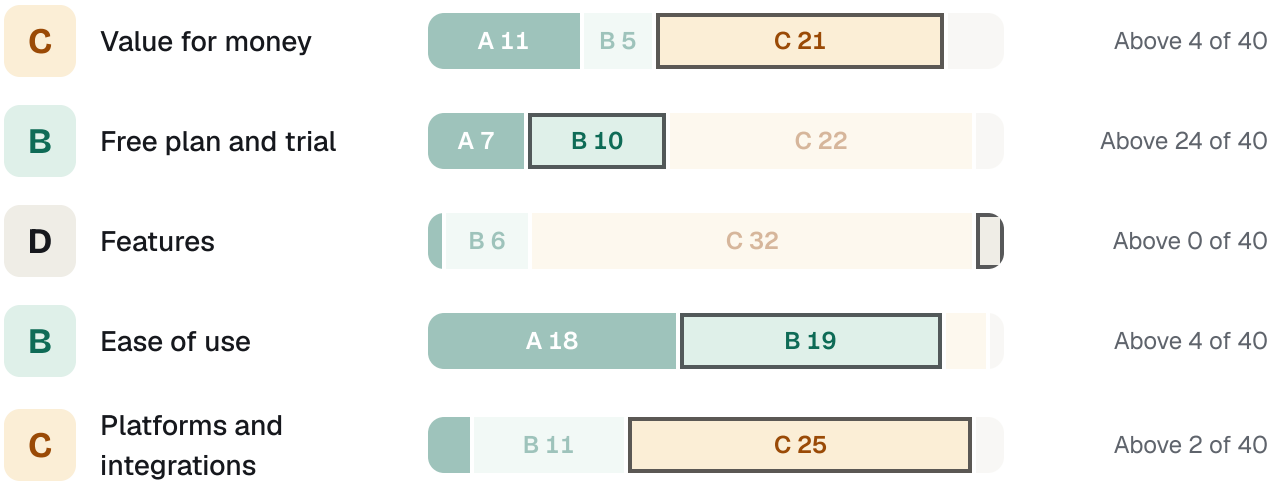

Other journaling apps it is graded above

FutureMe's GPA of 2.2 is higher than 4 of the 40 other journaling apps we grade, and level with 5.

It stands best on free plan and trial (B, above 24 of 40) and worst on features (D, above 0).

Each grade against the category

Every bar is all 41 journaling apps we grade, cut by the letter each got. FutureMe's own letter is outlined.

Keep it, or make your own?

Whether this is something you could build for yourself with an AI app builder, and what you would give up.

Your call

A journal at its plainest is dated entries of text and photos.

You could make the core of FutureMe for yourself: daily notes and notes. Whether that is worth the price is your call.

What you could make

- Daily notes and notes: an app builder makes these well.
- It runs in a browser, which is where something home-made would run too.

What this rests on. FutureMe's listing: what it does, where it runs, what it plugs into and what it costs. It is a judgement about the kind of software this is. We have not built a replacement for it, and making your own means looking after it too. How we decide, and every tool's verdict.
